Re: Batory Box insulation hi ron. i think the batteries will be fine as long as they are kept up with a float charge from the solar. it's when the batteries drain off some power, even if it's only the idle losses of storage without a float charge, that's when there's more water content in the batteries and more of a possibility of freezing and cracking the case. if you want to you can loosely ...

I'll be building a well insulated/ventilated box to house the batteries but I was wondering if anyone has suggestions on how to safely heat the box. (these will be running in the middle of a forest and somewhat isolated) Eg i'm aware of the battery gassing problem, so some sort of passive or indirect heating capability would be ideal.
