Adventurer, explorer, and ambitious sea merchant Captain William Keeling discovered the idyllic islands whilst exploring the area for the trading outfit, East India Company, in 1609. During his voyage from Java to England, Keeling didn't view the islands as income generators and, after discovering the atolls, never claimed ownership.

It was 1609 when Captain William Keeling discovered the islands whilst in the service of the East Indian Company. They were then mostly ignored until visited by Captain Clunies-Ross in 1814. As he passed on a voyage to India he came ashore and raised the British Union Flag on what is known today as Horsburg Island.
