Our projects and technologies utilise underground salt caverns for large-scale long-duration electricity storage. They integrate them with renewable energy generation, CAES (Compressed Air Energy Storage), electrolysis, and fuel synthesis - supporting both electricity and gas grids, and interconnectors.

The first works by spinning a rotor (or flywheel) to very high speeds using electrical energy. This process creates kinetic energy which is effectively stored within the spinning rotor until it's required, at which point the kinetic energy is converted back into electricity. Supercapacitors take a similar approach but store power electrically.
