providing clean energy solutions in humanitarian, Disaster and Peace building settings. We provide renewable energy services to organizations, government agencies, businesses operating in challenging locations where grid electricity is unreliable or non-existent, and diesel fuel is expensive and difficult to source.

Clean energy avoids competition between domestic and productive uses of energy (i. e. use of wood or cow dung as fuel for cooking or to support agriculture). Energy to lift water, mechanize production and to nourish crops is essential for agricultural intensification, but also for livestock rearing, a key livelihood strategy in the Sudan.

Additionally, establishing temporary energy solutions, such as mobile power units or temporary fuel supply chains, can help bridge the gap during infrastructure repairs, specifically for critical sectors like agriculture and food supply chains. ...
