

In humans and other mammals and in birds, the heart is a four-chambered double pump that is the centre of the circulatory system. In humans it is situated between the two lungs and slightly to the left of centre, behind the ...

brain, the mass of nerve tissue in the anterior end of an organism. The brain integrates sensory information and directs motor responses; in higher vertebrates it is also the centre of learning. The human brain weighs ...

Here, we will explore the list of 206 bones in the human body, accompanied by a detailed diagram, but first, we will discuss about the concept of bone. What is Bone? Bones are rigid connective tissues that form the skeletal ...

In this article, we will look into different types of cells in the human body and their functions. Two types of cells make up life on Earth: prokaryotic and eukaryotic cells. Prokaryotic cells are simpler and primitive without membrane ...

The earliest attempts to name human body parts arose from practical needs and direct observation. Ancient civilizations, particularly in Egypt and Mesopotamia, documented anatomical knowledge related to surgery, ...

The human body wikipedia

Web: <https://kindanewdecor.co.za>

